THEY POINT WITH PRIDE.

The Democratic platform points with pride to Mayor Brewer's confession that he permitted gambling in Ogden for nineteen months of his twenty months as mayor. It does not take much to cause some Democrats to point with pride.

WHERE IS THE $21,000?

Mayor Brewer thinks he can win this election by throwing dust in the eyes of the people. What has become of the $21,000 profit of the waterworks? The city auditor's report for six months ending June 30th 1909 does not show a cent of it. Where

HE APPROVED OF THE LIES.

Mayor Brewer knows that the speech made by his chief lieutenant at the court house, Saturday night, against his opponent is a bundle of lies. Yet the mayor approves of the wholesale bunch of lies. Does Mayor Brewer expect to get votes with lies? Look out, Brewer; you can't fool the people all the time

DOES THEIR CONSCIENCE WORRY THEM?

The Democratic orators, Saturday night, spent the greater part of their time in explaining something about the waterworks deal. The Republican platform is silent on the waterworks deal, and yet our Democratic friends seem to anticipate an attack on the waterworks deal. What is there that causes our Democratic friends to flee when no man pursueth? What is the matter with the waterworks deal, any-

ELDERKIN AND ALEX.

The Rev. Noble Strong Elderkin a few months ago said Mayor Brewer had violated his promises made before election to the ministers of the gospel, and in his church the strong noble Elderkin said very bad things about Brewer and his gang. He even said Brewer had made a pledge with hell. Oh, my! Oh, my! And yet the Rev. Elderkin Strong Noble helped to renominate the man who deals with the bad man from the bad place. Oh, Mr. Elderkin, how could you? What promise has Alex made to you this time? Are you sure you have the devil coppered this time?

HE HAS MADE ANOTHER

So Chas. Smurthwaite, the man who at one time thought he had been set aside by divine Providence to start a new church, and who later tried to start the Salt Lake American party in Ogden, and who tried to unload some salt land on to the Mormon church leaders, and then got mad and joined Frank Cannon in belittling the president of the Mormon church, has made another flop, and is now the leader of the Brewer gang of political lieve he would jump into the camp of his satanic majesty should the latter appear on earth.

SMURTHWAITE PUT FORWARD TO LEAD.

Chas. H. Smurthwalte, spokesman for Alex Brewer, head of the Democratic campaign, and voucher for the good name of his candidate, by his venomous speech of Saturday in the Democratic convention, invited a reply in kind. His entire speech abounded in coarse insinuations against the character of the opponent of Alex

Brewer. Charley Smurthwaite's every public utterance, for fifteen years past, has been made up of just such innuendoes, first against one man and then against another, until the public has come to the conclusion that he is a malcontent with a mind so warped as to be everlastingly at war with himself and tne world.

There is not a calling in life to which he has responded in which he has found anything good. At one time his glibe tongue caused him to be called to Washington as a witness against a man who had greatly befriended him. He had been complaining that his friend had ruined him. were but imaginary, and that he had vilified and slandered without the least shadow of justification.

And so in his latest outburst of fury, he has charged baseness and corrupon without the slightest foundation for his charges.

But he is the right man in the right place. We can plainly see that the Democratic campaign is to be one of malignity, false swearing and defama tion of character, and Charley is equipped by distorted vision and perverted mind to lead the muck-rakers.

WONDERS OF THE WORLD.

The New York Sun says children born nowadays are to be congratulated by their elders on coming into a world of wonders. The progress made in scientific discovery during the past twenty years is proclaimed as transcanding all the marvels of ancient times, and it is pointed out that by the quick succession of the automobile, the aeroplane and the wireless telegraph and telephone, to say nothing of a dozen other steps forward in chemistry and mechanics, this world has been transformed into such a realm of magic as story tellers of Damascus could not have figured.

And yet how often it is made plain that we must be merely on the brink of discoveries far greater in their actual service to the race than those yet attained; we are as yet able only to touch the fringe of these mysteries which swim invisible and inaudible before us. Only the other day Mr. Edison, speaking of the electric power plant made to supply light for illuminations, said that we are able to conforce generated. "Electricity!" said pedition," the American edition of he. "Understand it? Why, if we knew what it was we could make over the physical world; but we are only able to know a very few things of this tic explorers, gives an account of his choose to call it, can be made to do."

that the ten grammes of radium chloride, equivalent to one gramme of pure radium, which was the total output of the fustrian government's mines for eighteen months, are guarded day and night by watchmen at the mines preparatory to their removal to Vienna. The radium chloride is to be packed in a leaded capsule and entrusted to several responsible officials. After the Vienna hospitals have been supplied without cost, the remainder is to be offered for sale at $75,000 per gramme-about 15.5 grains. Here is a striking example of knowledge halting on the brink of discovery. It is quite inconceivable that the world's supply of radium should long remain so small. The discovery of the substance itself is but of yesterday; some early tomorrow may disclose its presence in commercially appreciable quantities either in nature or in the laboratory; if so, the incident of a feather's weight of it inclosed in an armored case and guarded by soldiers will be smiled at like some old Ara-

HEAVY INVASION BY FOREIGNERS.

There have come to this country from the time immigration records began in the fiscal year ended September 30, 1820; to the end of the last fiscal year, according to the estimates of the New York Mail, a grand total of 26,852,723 persons, as the Department of Commerce and Labor reports. This weighty and unparalleled figure will bear a few comparisons and deductions If the average immigrant steamship fare for this period has been $25, the peasants of Europe have paid the ocean carriers nearly $700,000,000 for the chance to begin life in a new land. That is almost equivalent to one-tenth the wealth of the country in 1850. Our total immigration has been nearly one-third the present population of the country, derived from both native and immigrant source. It is more than the entire population of the country in 1850. It is more than threefourths the population of Italy, about two-thirds the population of France, more than two-fifths the population of Germany, more than half the populations of Great Britain, Austria-Hungary, Japan and the Turkish Empire, and equal to the entire population of Spain, Portugal and Sweden combined.

If Bedio had it right, the population heelers? Well, what next? We be- of the earth at the death of the Em- WANT ADS BRING BIG RESULTS peror Augustus was but 54,000,000. If Mulhall has it right, the population of Europe at the time Columbus discovered the new world was only a little more than 50,000,000. That there has come to this country a body of immigrants equal to half the population of Europe in 1492, and nearly half the population of the world in the Augustan era, is a fact beside which the invasions of Franks and Gauls and Goths and Vandals and Huns appear inconsiderable.

THE PESTS OF THE ARCTIC.

Thunderstorms, mosquitoes and gigantic spiders. One would say, on first thought, that the reference is to the temperate zone or the tropics, but that would be wrong. It is the Arctic region where, in biting cold, the mosquito and poisonous spider are pests equal to those of the tropics, and where thunderstorms jar and annoy. The New York Sun, speaking of the enthusiasts in polar exploration says that they almost invariably deem it needful to justify the risk of life and limb involved in such enterprises by expatiating upon the advancement of science which will result from Arctic or Antarctic travel. There was much On the witness stand it was proved in this line of argument prior to the that the wrongs he complained of location of the magnetic pole; but since then the scientific advantages to be derived from Arctic investigation appear to have been somewhat exaggerated. The interest in the varlous endeavors to reach the North pole has naturally been immense: but very little of this interest has been of a truly scientific character, in recent years at least. In the midst of the row about the re> spective achievements of Cook and Peary comes the announcement from San Francisco of a notable journey in the Arctic by a whaleman, W. J. Bower by name. In a gasoline schooner he and his party made their way to Prince Albert Land, the northernmost extremity of Alaska, and explored the interior of the country, whose inhabitants they describe as Indians rather than Eskimos. This difference is a contribution to ethnological science, while Captain Bower announces an equally interesting discovery in zoology. There is a curious spider in Prince Albert Land which attains the enormous length of six inches and which is as dangerous as it is big. One of these creatures, which abound there in the spring time, bit the explorer, and the resulting wound was so serious that it destroyed the sight of one of his eyes. Most people no more think of associating spiders with the Arctic than they would think of associating white bears with the Amazon. The fact is, however, that the polar regions present some striking curiositles of climate and natural history.

We have before us the "Narrative of a Journey to the Shores of the Polar Sea in the Years 1819, '20, 21 and '22, by John Franklin, Captain R. N., trol only some 5 per cent of all the F. R. S., and Commander of the Exwhich was published at Philadelphia in 1824. In this volume Sir John Franklin, one of the most famous of all Arc-Coppermine river and eastward from its mouth along the shores of the Polar sea. Repeatedly in his narrative do we find mention of Arctic thunderstorms and complaint of the bitter annoyance which the travelers suffered from the Arctic mosquitoes. When actually on the seacoast he says of these pests:

"There was a sharp frost last night which formed a pretty thick crust of ice in a kettle of water that stood in the tents. Notwithstanding this state of temperature, we were tormented by swarms of mosquitoes: we had persuaded ourselves that these pests could not sustain the cold in the vicinity of the sea, but it appears they haunt every part of this country in defiance of climate."

There is entry after entry of a similar character. In the same region thunderstorms were of frequent occurrence in July. Indeed, when the explorers first endeavored to embark upon the Arctic ocean, after their long overland journey from Hudson bay, they "were detained by a strong northeast gale which continued the whole day with constant thunder showers,"

MORE WATER FOR THE SAND RIDGE.

The decision of the Davis & Weber Counties Canal company directors, to immediately inaugurate the work of dirt canal to an aqueduct of concrete promises to add materially to the prosperity of this city and the advancement of the farming section south of Ogden of a million dollars, and to that large stalling electrical equipment capable of generating as much power as is now produced by the Ogden canvor plant of the Utah Light & Railway

While the canal is being concreted and the power plant built there will be distributed large sums of money and at this time of year the extra work will prove a blessing to a large number of workmen and indirectly benefit the business houses of Ogden, but the greater benefit will come when the increased flow of water through the canal makes possible the cultivating of a much larger area of land on the Sand Ridge to the scuth and west of this city. To that dis and west of this city. trict there is coming a transformation which can be appreciated only by those who have seen the develop of the last two or three years. years hence, now barren stretches will be orchards in bearing and land that is selling today for a few dollars an acre will be commanding hundreds of dollars an acre

BE ONE OF THE FIRST

REMEMBER: Every article in the dry goods section must be closed out without a single exception and has been sacrificed to force a decisive clearance. Profits wiped out unthought of. This simply means that everything has to go-the decks must be cleared for further action. This great Closing Out Sale will finish the Business Change Sale of this Summer. Then we advertised that we would make great changes in our business. The change will be to close out our entire line of goods above mentioned and then remodel our stores for Men's and Boys' Clothing, Shoes and Furnishings, also Women's Shoes.

We don't want to be misunderstood—we are not going out of business altogether, but are going to sell every article of merchandise in the north store at a very great sacrifice.

Without a doubt this will be one of the most powerful money saving sales that has ever been advertised in Ogden.
